Review Quotes for Barnacles of Joy

- "One of the single most talented folksy singer/songwriters I've had the pleasure of hearing lately. On Barnacles Of Joy, Lowe proves herself to be an exploring and curious songwriter, continually redefining her own sounds and songs, always refusing to stand still. This is an admirably successful and pleasing album from a truly developed songwriter and performer".
-Stein Haukland, Ink19
- "Like the title implies, Vanessa Lowe's lyrics pack a punch. With "Red hot poker in my eye" or "I wanna bake you up and save you for a rainy day", Lowe makes you stop, listen, and contemplate. Think Joni meets Ani. Ladies, this is great music for kicking it at home and belting out the words. Her songs are fresh, chipper, and poetic."
-Jen Dalton - SF Weekly
- "Marking Lowe's deepest venture into the world of pure acoustic instrumentation, Barnacles of Joy strikes the ears with the accidental wisdom of I Ching coins, pointing the way. Recorded in the artist's living room during breaks from touring, the album shows what happens when someone is so steeped in song, it becomes an avatar for observations they might have witnessed unawares".

- "Vanessa has a gift for songwriting that is reminiscent of Aimee Mann."
-Amy Lotsberg – collectedsounds.com, March 2003
- "Lowe certainly has songwriting talent in her blood."
-No Ripcord
- "She uses her voice as a well-crafted tool to tell short stories whose protagonists are always intriguing, sometimes even amazing."

Review Quotes for Her House of Sin

- "Very sophisticated, beautifully recorded, and - so rare these days - she knows how to tell a compelling story in under 3 minutes! Vanessa is a very welcome addition to the Bay Area music scene".
-Rosalie Howarth, Host of KFOG's Acoustic Sunrise
- "There has been only one CD that had the originality and spark to make me hit the play button over and over. Vanessa Lowe has a unique artistic voice - her melodies are full of surprises; unexpected rhythms and chromatic turns that make your ears stand up straight, yet every shift is natural. This is a very satisfying album".
